The Sabbath .- BY SIR EDWARD BULWER LYLTON. Fresh glides the brook and blows the gale, Yet yonder halts the quiet mili; The whirring wheel the rushing sail, How motionless and still!

Six days of toil, poor child of Cain, Thy strength the slave of Want may be; The seventh thy limbs escape the chain-Ah, tender was the law that gave

This holy respite to the breast; To breathe the gale to watch the wave, And know-the wheel may rest! But where the waves the gentlest glide
What image charms, to lift thine eyes!
The spire reflected on the tide.

Invites thee to the skies. To teach the soul its nobler worth, This rest for mortal toils is given : Go, snatch the brief reprieve from earth, And pass-a guest to heaven.

They tell thee, in their dreaming school, Of power from old dominion hurled, When rich and poor, with juster rule, Shall share the altered world. Alas! since time itself began, That fable hath but fooled the hour;

Each age that ripens Power in Man, But subjects Man to Power. Yet every day in seven at least, One bright republic shall be known :-Man's world awhile hath surely ceased, When God proclaims his own!

Six days may Rank divide the poor, A Dives from thy banquet hail! The seventh, the Father opens the door, And holds his feast for all!

A Life Pleture.

The following beautiful sketch of the birth and growth of civilization in the West is from Frederika Bremer's new work, entitled "Homes of the New World." It will be recollected by our old citizens (says the Minnesota Pioneer) that Miss Bremer spent some days in St. Paul in 1850, as the guest of Ex-Governor Ramsey, and visited the Falls of St. Anthony and other places of inferest in the neighborhood. She was highly delighted with the pic-turesque beauties of the place, and was often observed walking out alone along the bluffs of the Mississippi, contemplating its natural scenery. Who does not see in the following picture the rise and progress of many of the cities of the West, and more particufurly of our own St. Farri, the future Metropolis of the Northwest?

"Your Majesty has certainly often read descriptions of the wonderful waterfall, Niagara; of the almost miracule us prairies of the West, where the sun mirrors his image in an ocean of sunflowers waving in the wind; of the rapid growth of States and cities in the Great West; of the great river Mississippi, and the gold mines of California, and many other lions of the Great West. But less known are the first steps of civilization, its first impress on the wilderness; and this it was, together with the great spectacle of nature, which most attracted my carliest attention; for it is amusing to observe the first steps of the child, and how he advances and grows to man's estate. It is an image worthy the regards of a motherly queen. The trees fall before the axe along the banks of the river-and rivers everywhere in North America—a little little log house is erec-ted on the skirts of the forest and banks of the river; a woman stands in the door-way with a little chubby child in her arms. The Contest at the Hippodrome .- Yankee Girl vs. The French Woman-Intense Excitement !- Amerlea Victorious!

It will be recollected that a Vankee Girl challenged all the French horse women in New York, to ride for a wager, the contest to come off at the Hippodrome. The Yankee girl appeared "according to notice." know-Uncle, says he : "Go it, little one! and says dressed in true American style, her sash representing I: "I'm a wentin, old boy !" Wasn't that fun, Jim ? the stars and stripes and a shield upon her breast, Bets ran high. The first evening an unusually large audience witnessed the contest. The Yankee girl took the lead beating her rival, to the delight of Jonathan who sat, glorious in high collars and plaid pants, on one side, but to the mortification of the French gentleman who sat opposite, furious in his moustache. The second night the crowd was still greater,-the excitement more intense-the French feeling higher, the universal Yankee nation in great force. The Yankee girl was again triumphant, leading the French woman from the start.

Third night the enthusiasm of the parties (now distinctly drawn,) was at the very highest. The stars and stripe fluttered proudly in the breeze, and the tri-colors waved proudly too. The national feeling was thoroughly aroused, and as the Yankee girl came in winner, a tremendous shout went up for the victress. The orchestra struck up Hail Columbia, and thus ended the great contest, to the glory of America, the excitement of the city, and the profit Hippodrome.
